How to get here

Camper

The camper van parking facility in Via di Pratole on the edge of the old town is equipped with waste drains, drinking water and public showers. The city centre is reachable by bike (via the cycle lane) or bus (green LAM line).

www.cpt.pisa.it

Coaches

All tourist coaches terminate in the coach park in Via Pietrasantina, at the northern entrance to the city. This coach park is about 800 metres from Piazza dei Miracoli, which can be reached on foot (about 10 minutes) or bus (frequent service on the red LAM line).

Hotel bookings and tourist services

Car

Most of the historic centre of Pisa is subject to traffic restrictions. Unauthorized access to the restricted zone ("ZTL") is punishable with a fine. Guests of hotels within the ZTL can obtain a temporary parking permit from their hotels. Visitors in possession of a disabled driver's pass can access the ZTL on condition that they first request authorization from the local police (tel. +39 050 910851/910810).

By sea

The new pleasure port in Marina di Pisa faces the Tyrrhenian Sea from the south bank of the Arno estuary and is equipped with all the most modern port facilities. Designed to accommodate 344 boats, the harbour enclosure has a depth of between 3.5 and 5 metres, enough to enable the movement and berthing of yachts of class 8 or higher. Just 20 kilometres from Pisa is Livorno, a ferry port serving the islands of the Tyrrhenian and a major port of call for international cruise liners.

By air

Galileo Galilei international airport offers direct routes to many Italian cities and a large number of international destinations, in Europe and further afield. The airport is located 1 km from the historic centre of Pisa, and can be reached in just a few minutes by a bus service which shuttles between the airport's rail terminal and Pisa's central railway station. A bus service (LAM red line) also runs regularly between the airport, the central station and the city centre. A taxi rank can also be found at the terminal exit.

www.pisa-airport.com

Train

Pisa's central station is a major regional and national rail interchange. There are frequent services to Florence, Rome, Genoa and Lucca. The station lies on the southern fringes of the old town, around a mile from the airport and just two hundred metres from the intercity coach terminal. Outside the central station are a taxi rank and bus terminal with regular services to Piazza dei Miracoli, the airport and the Cisanello hospital complex.

P.I.S.A. where beauty is at home

One of Italy's great cities of history and art, Pisa is justly famous for its Leaning Tower and Piazza dei Miracoli. But there's a less well-known side to its heritage that's also well worth discovering: the historic centre with its Renaissance palazzos, medieval tower houses, Romanesque and Gothic churches, and the warren of narrow streets and small piazzas that back the riverfront esplanades. There's much worth seeing here: Piazza dei Cavalieri with its church of the same name and the impressive sgraffito façade of the Palazzo della Carovana, the botanical gardens and the National Museum of San Matteo, with its unique collection of 12th- and 13th-century masterpieces. But Pisa's also a young and dynamic city, with its university and prestigious research institutes: the Scuola Normale Superiore, the Scuola Superiore Sant'Anna, and the CNR (National Research Council). It has much to offer in terms of leisure, too.

There's excellent shopping on Corso Italia and under the arcades of Borgo Stretto, and authentic trattorias around the market in Piazza delle Vettovaglie. A short boat trip downriver along the Arno is the San Rossore natural park, a protected area that's given over to macchia and Mediterranean plantlife.

Open all year round. Pisa has a rich and eclectic programme of civic and cultural events: Pisan new year, the Internet Festival and Pisabookfestival during Giugno Pisano, the Luminara light festival, the historic regatta and the Battle of the Bridge pageant, the Regata delle Antiche Repubbliche Marinare (every four years) and the Anima Mundi festival of sacred music.

In the immediate environs of Pisa, sights worth seeing include the Romanesque basilica of San Piero a Grado, the charterhouse of Calci with its museum of natural history, and the fortified village of Vicopisano, with its Palazzo Pretorio and castle designed by Brunelleschi. A little way up the valley of the Arno are Pontedera, whose Piaggio museum is a place of pilgrimage for Vespa lovers from all over the world, and San Miniato, famed for its white truffles and the ideal base for exploring the surrounding countryside. Overlooking the Valdera, Colline Pisane and Val di Cecina in the southern reaches of Pisa province rises the ancient town of Volterra, renowned for its Etruscan and medieval ruins and now home to a major Etruscan museum, a remarkably good art gallery, and a museum of alabaster.

Seaside, nature and leisure

With Marina di Pisa, Tirrenia and Calambrone to the south of the Arno estuary and Marina di Vecchiano to the north, the Pisan coastline has seaside resorts and sandy beaches that make it the ideal location for family holidays and for lovers of sports like golf and windsurfing.

The entire Pisan coast is contained by the natural park of Migliarino-San Rossore-Massaciuccoli, a mosaic of remarkably unspoiled nature reserves that offer endless opportunities for exploration. The hinterland has a variety of landscapes and ecosystems: the green hills of the Monti Pisani and the Colline Metallifere; the vine- and olive-clad scarps of the Volterra area, and the geysers and hot pools of the upper Val di Cecina.

All over Pisa province the countryside, embellished over the course of the centuries with terraced olive groves and row after row of vines stretching into the distance, is dotted with farmhouses, rural hotels and old mills. The countryside around Pisa is also rich in hot springs whose waters have been prized since Antiquity for their curative properties. The spa resorts that have grown up around these springs are frequented not only for therapeutic purposes but also for beauty treatments, fitness, wellbeing and peace and quiet. One of the leading spas is San Giuliano Terme, which rose to fame in the 19th century when it was frequented by the European aristocracy. It offers a mix of traditional and contemporary treatments in elegant and refined surroundings. Visitors to the spa of Liveto Terme can enjoy the benefits of hydroponic therapy and stroll in the spa gardens with their recreational areas, swimming pool and tennis courts. The oldest spa resort, Casciana Terme, has a cure and recuperation centre with the most advanced technology and services, as well as an elegant wellbeing centre whose panoramic terrace overlooks a large outdoors thermal pool and the surrounding gardens.

For food lovers

Pisa province is more than lovely landscapes and artistic heritage. It also has an impressive gastronomic tradition. Leading local products include wine, extra-virgin olive oil, truffles, cheese, cured meats and much, much more. A number of dedicated food and wine trails take in impressive landscapes and country chapels in their voyage of discovery of a local food and wine tradition whose roots strike right down to the civilizations of the Etruscans and Romans.

Among the leading itineraries are the Wine Trails and the Olive Oil trail. Follow the Colline Pisane Wine Trail and you'll get the chance to try delights such as Chianti DOCG delle Colline Pisane, Bianco Pisano San Torpè DOC and Vin Santo San Torpè DOC.

The Etruscan Coast Wine Trail loops into Livorno province, and among the Pisan wines included on its route is the renowned Montescudaio DOC, produced in red and white varieties.

The Monti Pisani Olive Oil Trail is dedicated to the famous olive oil which has been produced since the Middle Ages on the seaward slopes of the Monti Pisani, where the favourable climate and terrain help make it one of Tuscany's most highly prized olive oils.

And then there's the truffle, mainly found in the hills around San Miniato and now the star of a series of initiatives, chief among which is the national white truffle festival held in San Miniato every November. Other products of note include cured meats (some of which are unique and not to be found anywhere else), cheese (with a number of varieties of ewe's milk cheeses), pasta, Lari cherries and traditional sweets such as torta co' bischeri (Pontasserchio), nozza (Calcinaia) and... even a world-famous chocolate.

Places

(museums and historic sites)

1 Piazza dei Miracoli

Dominated by the Leaning Tower, Piazza dei Miracoli is the hub around which the artistic and architectural fame of Pisa revolves. The dazzling whiteness of the monuments, rising from the radiant green of the grounds of the Piazza, is a unique spectacle for visitors. The harmony of the arches which makes the imposing structure of the Leaning Tower so graceful is repeated in the nearby cathedral and - a little further away - the Baptistery, creating a visual and stylistic continuum of rare beauty. Two further attractions on Piazza dei Miracoli are the Museo delle Sinopie, with its collection of preparatory drawings for the frescoes of the Camposanto, and the Museo dell'Opera del Duomo, with its impressive collection of sculptures, paintings and reliquaries. In 1987, UNESCO included Piazza dei Miracoli on its World Heritage list.

2 Museo della Grafica

Pisa's museum of graphic arts is housed in Palazzo Lanfranchi. One of the biggest public collections of contemporary graphic arts, it offers scholars, students and enthusiasts a truly stellar overview of the art of graphic design. The museum also traces the development of the graphic arts in the 19th and 20th centuries with documentary exhibits of work by Sebastiano Timpanaro, Carlo Ludovico Ragghianti and Giulio Carlo Argan.

3 National Museum of San Matteo

Located in the medieval monastery of the same name beside the river Arno, the National Museum of San Matteo has one of Europe's finest collections of medieval art. Its collections include a complete series of works by leading Pisan and Tuscan painters from the 12th to the 17th centuries and an impressive section dedicated to ceramics and archaeological finds. Among its masterpieces of Pisan sculpture from the 12th to 15th centuries are the polyptych of Simone Martini, originally in the church of Santa Caterina d'Alessandria, a Nativity by Tino di Camaino, and the Madonna del Latte by the brothers Andrea and Nino Pisano.

The Piaggio Museum

The Piaggio museum occupies a former machine shop that is one of the oldest buildings in the company's Pontedera plant. Its Piaggio, Vespa and Gilera collections are on permanent exhibition: all models are unique, original, and often curious, and all have made a contribution to the history of transport in Italy and around the world. Among the star exhibits are rare Vespas that served as inspiration for artists like Salvador Dalí, and models that were equipped with special fairings in an attempt to break the speed record in the 1950s. There are also sections dedicated to the legendary Ciao and Ape in some of their more creative iterations.

PISA, ART AND CULTURE

Pisa is the city of Galileo and the Leaning Tower. But it offers so much more besides, and it really requires a few days to take in all its attractions. The city grew on a bend in the river Arno, and the river makes a fitting setting for palazzos of the granducal period, Romanesque and Gothic churches, medieval and Renaissance fortresses. Pisa was once an obligatory stop for the Grand Tourists of the European aristocracy, and many authors - Italian and European - have written of the fascination the city exerted on them. Overlooking the Arno are a number of museums: the San Matteo, the Palazzo Reale, Museo della Grafica and Palazzo Blu, a major venue for travelling exhibitions. The area between Piazza dei Miracoli and the river is the medieval heart of the Maritime Republic of Pisa, while Piazza dei Cavalieri, built during the Renaissance, is the symbol of the Medici domination. The piazza was commissioned by Cosimo I dei Medici and is named after the knights of the Order of St Stephen. Laid out by Giorgio Vasari, the piazza is lined by some important palazzos and churches of the granducal period, including the Palazzo dei Cavalieri with its impressive façade, now occupied by the prestigious Scuola Normale Superiore. The churches of Pisa are well worth visiting: The small Gothic church of Santa Maria della Spina on the banks of the Arno, Santo Sepolcro, built on an octagonal floor plan in emulation of the Church of the Holy Sepulchre in Jerusalem, San Paolo a Ripa d'Arno (known as the Duomo Vecchio or old cathedral), and the churches of Santa Caterina d'Alessandria, San Francesco, San Michele in Borgo and San Pierino in Vinculis with its crypt. Also not to be missed are the Museo del Calcolo with its collection of calculating machines, the Orto Botanico (the oldest university botanic gardens in Europe), the Keith Haring mural (the American artist's last work in Europe) and the Ancient Ships compound, with a guided tour that explores this important archaeological site that has only recently been unearthed.

VOLTERRA AND VAL DI CECINA. ETRUSCAN, ALABASTER, AND THE VOLTURI

Dominating the Cecina valley from its hillside 70 km outside Pisa, Volterra is a treasure trove of Etruscan, Roman, medieval and Renaissance art. Today, it retains its distinctly medieval appearance, but the Etruscan influence - Volterra was originally known as Velathri - is never far from the surface. The focal point of the medieval town is Piazza dei Priori and the imposing palazzo of the same name, its façade pierced by three rows of biforate windows and studded with the coats of arms of various Florentine magistrates. Volterra's religious buildings are concentrated around Piazza San Giovanni: the baptistery, Ospedale di Santa Maria and the Romanesque cathedral. Volterra is famed for its alabaster crafts, a centuries-long tradition which is kept alive in the shops and studios of the old town.

An exceptionally beautiful place, Volterra has often been the setting for books and films, such as Luchino Visconti's Sandra. More recently, the town came to global attention thanks to the US author Stephenie Meyer's The Twilight Saga: New Moon, a film based on the second novel in the Twilight series, was partly filmed here. Below Volterra, the Cecina valley is an ever-changing landscape where quintessentially Tuscan scenery - rolling hills, cypress trees, olive groves and vineyards - alternates with craggy outcrops, woodland and nature reserves, the spectacular ravines known as balze, and the spectacular steam vents of the geothermal belt. The geothermics museum of Larderello documents the history of geothermal energy, while the mining museum of Montecatini Val Di Cecina recalls a not-too-distant past when copper and iron were mined here.

WALKING IN THE PARK

The natural park of Migliarino-San Rossore-Massaciuccoli extends along the coastline of the provinces of Pisa and Lucca in a zone that was formerly a wetland of marshes and lagoons. Over time, alluvial deposits from the rivers Serchio and Arno have filled in the marshes, but the area is also the result of human intervention over a span of centuries, with artificial watercourses and land reclamation. The first reclamation campaigns were sponsored by the Medici. Thanks to its geographic location and climate, the park is unusually diverse in the environments it contains: a vast coastal wood, long stretches of beach and dune (Tirrenia and Marina di Vecchiano), and wetlands of international renown (Lago di Massaciuccoli, San Rossore).

The economy of the park is based on agriculture and related activities (agrifood products, pine nuts) and cattle and goat rearing. The authorities in charge of the park work constantly to improve cultivation methods and expand organic production, and have even introduced a local quality label to attest to the authenticity and organic pedigree of the produce of the park. Horse breeding has a long and illustrious tradition in these parts, and racehorses are just one aspect of this tradition. The San Rossore hippodrome is well attended during the race season (www.sanrossore.it).

SAN MINIATO AND THE VALDARNO: GOOD FOOD ON THE PILGRIM ROUTE

San Miniato stands on the Via Francigena, a major medieval pilgrim route which linked northern Europe with Rome. It is strategically located above the valley of the Arno, at the intersection of roads linking Florence, Pisa, Lucca and Siena. It's unsurprising, then, that the town has associations with Holy Roman Emperors like Frederick II or popes like Gregory V and Eugene IV. History has left an impressive heritage of art and architecture in San Miniato. Most of the town's sights are concentrated around Piazza del Duomo, where San Miniato's oldest and most prestigious buildings stand: the Palazzo Comunale, the episcopal palace, the 14th-century Palazzo dei Vicari, the cathedral and the Rocca Federiciana, symbol of the town. An interesting sequence of museums runs through the old town, with exhibitions, collections and historic buildings as well as museums proper. San Miniato is a Slow Food town and the heart of an area that's famous for its food and wine. Among the local delicacies is the white truffle, to which a festival is dedicated every November. Shops, taverns and restaurants offer the best in local and Tuscan tradition. On the culture front, San Miniato has a long tradition in theatre and cinema. The town regularly attracts theatrical productions of international renown, a drawing power that has earned it the nickname of "city of theatre". On the cinema side, San Miniato is home to a centre of film studies named after the filmmakers Paolo and Vittorio Taviani, natives of San Miniato who have drawn inspiration from the legend and history of their home town in films such as The Night of the Shooting Stars.

The Colline Pisane wine trail winds through the hills of Valdera and the lower Valdarno. Winding roads, panoramic views, hill towns bursting with history and culture, romantic villages and charming hamlets - with vineyards, wine shops, local produce and delicacies everywhere you look. The Colline Pisane are world-famous for wines such as Chianti DOCG, Colli dell'Etruria Centrale DOC (red and white), Bianco Pisano di San Torpè DOC (a wine best enjoyed young and fresh), and Vin Santo. The whole area produces a number of IGT wines, including the so-called Super Tuscans: full-bodied, well-ageing wines made from selected grapes, with carefully monitored fermentation and ageing in small (barriques) or large (tonneaux) barrels.

SPAS AND WELLNESS ON THE MONTI PISANI OLIVE OIL TRAIL

The Monti Pisani Olive Oil Trail is an association created by local authorities and olive oil producers in an endeavour to promote the excellent local extra-virgin olive oil. The trail takes in art and history, food and wine and local products ranging from Toscano Monti Pisani IGP extra-virgin olive oil to cured meats made from Mucco pisano, a local variety of beef, combining the pleasures of the palate with relaxation and wellbeing at the spas of San Giuliano and Uliveto. Pisa province is well stocked with hot springs that have been celebrated for their curative properties since Etruscan and Roman times.

The present-day thermal establishment of Bagni di Pisa was built during the granducal period, and rose to fame in the 19th century when it was frequented by the European aristocracy. It offers a mix of traditional and contemporary treatments in elegant and refined surroundings. The Monti Pisani Olive Oil Trail passes through the spa town of Uliveto Terme.

Uliveto has long been famous for the curative properties of its mineral-rich hot springs. Southwards through the hills, the trail comes to another town known for its springs, Casciana Terme, whose spa includes an advanced physical rehabilitation centre and a large open-air swimming pool much appreciated by families with children. There's also Villa Borri, a spa with wellness centre and themed treatment programmes.

Pisan New Year 2016

25 March 2015

Faithful to the tradition of the Maritime Republic, Pisa celebrates its own new year on 25 March. Every 25 March on the stroke of noon, a ray of sunlight shines into the nave of the cathedral and strikes a marble egg-shaped bracket above the pulpit of Giovanni Pisano. On Monday 25 March, therefore, Pisa will already be in 2016. The celebrations also mark the start of the tourist season in the city of the Leaning Tower and the surrounding province.

950 years of Pisa Cathedral

950 years since the foundation stone of its cathedral was laid, Pisa will be celebrating the anniversary with a series of events and initiatives, including the restoration of the apse of the cathedral and the façade of Museo delle Sinopie. In May there's an exhibition by Polish artist Igor Mitoraj, with sculptures, paintings and drawings. Part of the restored fresco cycle The Triumph of Death will be returned to its place in the Camposanto by summer.

4

Luminara di San Ranieri

16 June
after sundown

The magical Luminara di San Ranieri takes place every 16 June on the Pisan riverfront. It's a tradition that dates back to 1688. Over 120,000 small glass-enclosed candles are suspended from white wooden frames whose outlines follow the forms of the architecture – the buildings, bridges, churches and towers of the riverfront – they're attached to. It's an unforgettable sight, and to top it all off there's a fireworks display.

5

Palio di San Ranieri

17 June

Four boats in the colours of Pisa's traditional neighbourhoods – Santa Maria, San Francesco, San Martino and Sant'Antonio – hold a boat race on the Arno in a tradition that goes back to the days of the Maritime Republic.

6

Battle on the Bridge

29 June

A historical re-enactment of a battle in full period costume, the Gioco del Ponte or Battle on the Bridge unfolds in two different stages: a spectacular historic parade along the riverfront featuring with 700 marchers, and the "battle" proper on the Ponte di Mezzo, where the city's four traditional neighbourhoods, assembled in two rival factions, face off in a show of physical prowess. Victory goes to the side that succeeds in taking control of the bridge by pushing a heavy cart along a grooved track to the other side of the bridge.
